

follow us on twitter

Tourism Ireland reveals tenth and final 'Door of Thrones' in Belfast

The concluding episode of season six of Game of Thrones® aired last night and its final dramatic moments have been immortalised in Tourism Ireland's tenth and final 'Door of Thrones' – which is hanging in The Dark Horse on Hill Street, Belfast.

The unveiling of this week's door marks the culmination of our hugely successful campaign, created in partnership with HBO, which has been promoting Northern Ireland to millions of the show's fans worldwide since season six of GoT began back in April.

Tourism Ireland has been charting and celebrating the fantasy drama's links to Northern Ireland by creating a series of 'Doors of Thrones', with one appearing each week in pubs and venues close to GoT filming locations. Each door features key scenes and symbols from the show, made from the salvaged wood of trees blown down in Storm Gertrude at the Dark Hedges in Co Antrim – which serve as the backdrop for the Kingsroad, perhaps the most iconic Game of Thrones® location.

We also reveal our final, limited edition Game of Thrones® stamp, produced in conjunction with the Royal Mail.

Our 2016 Game of Thrones® campaign continues to promote Northern Ireland to millions of fans worldwide. Click here to read more.

Tourism Ireland's Game of Thrones campaign 2016: creating the doors week 10

Send to a Friend »

Published by Tourism Ireland © 2016 All rights reserved.

Newsletter Marketing Powered by Newsweaver